REMOVE your data

Think of all the music you've collected on your phone over the years. All those thousands of pictures and videos, your favorite games, the apps you can't live without, not to mention your contacts and emails. You've got a lot of data on your phone. Let's talk about relocating it, so it's ready and waiting to be transferred to your new phone.

Backing up

Backing up your iPhone makes it possible to transfer your old data to your new phone

Before you start:

Make sure to save and close your files before copying them from your phone to your computer

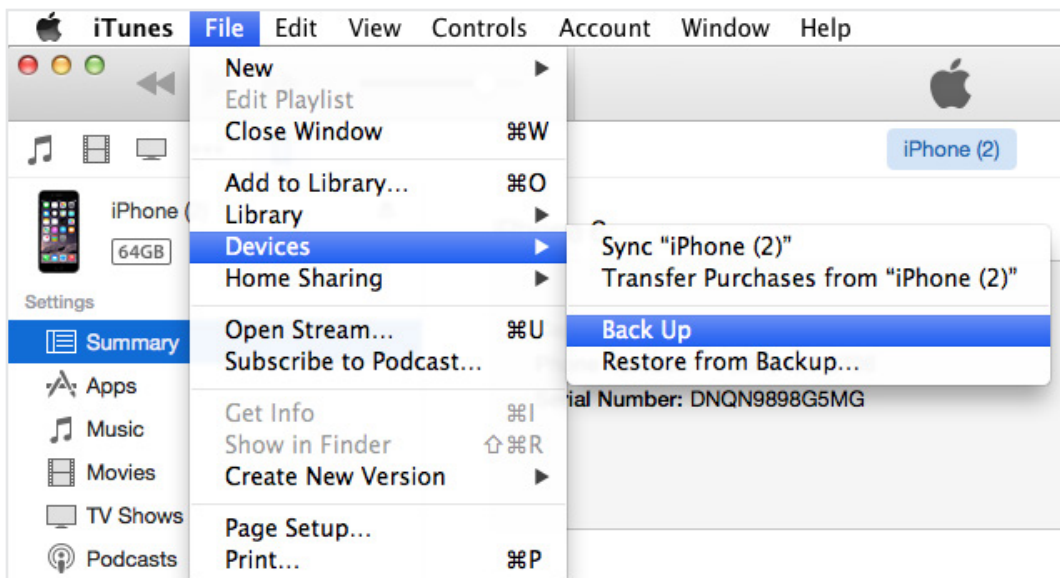

First, decide which backup method is right for you: iTunes or iCloud.

- If you have lots of photos or videos on your camera roll (1 GB or more), then iTunes is your best option
- If you rarely (or never) connect your phone to a Mac or PC, iCloud is the way to go.

Good to know: iCloud backs up information about the music, movies, TV shows, apps, and books you've purchased but not the purchased content itself. iCloud also backs up your photos and videos, unless you turn on iCloud Photo Library on your iOS device (iOS 8.1 or later). If you turn on iCloud Photo Library, your photos and videos are already stored in iCloud, so they aren't included in your iCloud backup

Backing up in iTunes

- Connect your iPhone to a Mac or PC (keep in mind you can only back up your iPhone on one computer)
- Open iTunes on your computer
- Select File > Devices > Backup

Backing up with iCloud

- Select Settings > iCloud > Backup, then turn on iCloud backup
- Your phone will now automatically back up your data when the phone is plugged in, connected to Wifi and the screen is locked

Backing up data manually

- Select Settings > iCloud > Backup > Backup now

Don't forget to sign out

This is a BIGGIE. Make sure to sign out of iCloud after you back up your data. If you don't sign out, all that data you just backed up? Poof, it'll be gone. But that won't happen, because here's what you're going to do once you've backed up your data using iCloud:

- Select Settings > iCloud > Sign out

If your phone has iOS 7 or a later version, choose Delete Account. If you delete all of your data manually without signing out of iCloud, it will delete the content from iCloud, as well. And that would be a major bummer.

RELEASE your phone from your carrier

Now that you've completed the important step of backing up your data, it's time to disconnect your phone and make sure your account is paid off.

Make the call

Call your carrier and disconnect service to your old iPhone. Before you do, make sure:

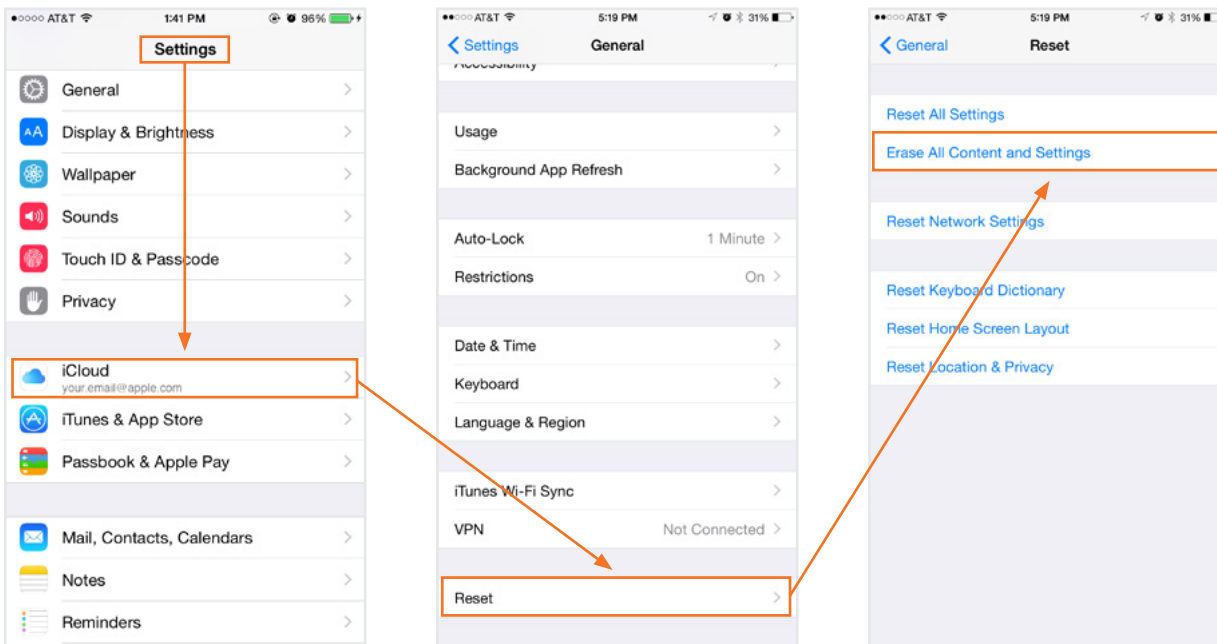

- No time is left on your contract
- No fees will be charged if you cancel your account
- All bills have been paid

RESET your old iPhone

You're in the final stretch of getting your old iPhone ready to sell. You've backed up all the data you want to keep and called your carrier to disconnect your old phone. The last step is wiping the slate clean by resetting your old phone.

Ready. Set. Reset

- Access the Reset menu
 - Select Settings > General > Reset > Erase all content and settings
 - If you have a password you will be asked to enter it at this time
- A warning box will appear with the option to Erase iPhone in red – tap this
 - Good to know: When Erase all content and settings is performed, your Find My iPhone locator will be disabled
- Ensure the phone was restored
 - The restoration process may take a few minutes. Once it's complete, check to make sure the phone has been reset to the original factory settings. Turn it off, and then back on. If you've successfully reset the phone, you'll see the iOS Setup Assistant that says "hello" at startup

Charge your phone

This is the very last step to preparing your iPhone ready to sell

Congratulations! Your phone is now clean as a whistle (data-wise, anyway). You've taken the important steps to make sure your information stays with you, and all your photos, videos, apps and music are backed up and ready to be transferred to your new phone. Now you can sell that old phone with confidence.
